Assignment 7. How will you transfer the solution to the community?

Turning one of your project's activities into a lesson plan and a take-home how-to card.

Part 1. Writing a lesson plan.

In the download documents link in the menu to the left I've placed an example lesson plan from my project in home gardening.

My suggestion would be to take this lesson plan example and begin editing right over the top of it with the information about your workshop. You should be able to cut and paste right from the field guide that you wrote last week right into the lesson plan I'm providing. Hopefully your guide was written in a step-by-step approach and each one of those steps can be used for a workshop activity. You will also need to use your imagination to think of how long each activity in the workshop will take—so that you can determine the length of the entire workshop.

The only challenge you may face will be to dream up some fun activities for your participants to do in the workshop. If you get stuck, ask a teacher friend if they can give you some ideas.

Part 2. Illustrated how-to card.

Visit the webpages on our website called Culturally Appropriate Illustrations and Knowledge Transfer, there are links at the top of this page. They will give you some background information on the kinds of illustrations that were looking for.

But for today, take the step-by-step ideas from your guide and the activities from your lesson plan and think about what they would look like visually if you were to draw one illustration for each activity. Then decide how many illustrations you're going to need. Four to a page seem to fit well -- so you could choose four illustrations or eight if it will be a two-sided how-to card. I have provided an example card in Week 7 of Download Class Documents called "Forming Garden Beds and Planting Seeds".

Don't be concerned about your artistic capabilities this is simply a process that I want you to work through from field guide to lesson plan to illustrations. You can always give your sketches to an illustrator to fix up prior to one of your workshops.

Part 3. Make sure you are prepared for next week.

If you're looking at this assignment at the beginning of the week and your workshop is at the end of week eight you still have almost 2 full weeks to finish up any last minute logistics. So just take a moment and look for your list make sure there isn't something you forgotten or the tricking behind schedule and.

The homework to turn in will be:

1. A lesson plan on your chosen activity from your project sent as a Word attachment to the course e-mail.
2. An illustrated how-to card of the activity that you have scanned and sent as an attachment to the course e-mail.

Go to Magee's Example Project Assignment Seven to see what this could look like.

See you next week.
